

Is your business at risk of breaking competition law?

Ask yourself these questions

Are you in a market where you know most, or all of your competitors?

Do you have competitors who are also customers or business partners?

Do you have a large number of sales staff?

Do staff frequently move between businesses in your sector?

YES

Do you have contact with your competitors through work (ie, at trade events or association meetings) or at social events?

YES

Do you ever discuss your prices or fees?

Do you ever talk about your customers or territories?

Do you ever share information about your future commercial plans?

Do you ever agree to work together or follow set rules?

YES

CAREFUL! you could be breaking competition law

Agreeing with your competitors how you do business can be illegal. You could face significant penalties or be stopped from running your company. Make sure you and your staff understand the risks.

Don't know what's illegal?

See our 'Quick guide' on Competing fairly in business.

Need to report it?

If you become aware of others acting illegally, then you should report it.

Call the Commerce Commission on 0800 943 600.

Want to protect your business?

Watch our videos or read our short guide to find out how to keep your business compliant.

