

The NZ grocery industry is sick and needs to be fixed. The current duopoly operates in two completely different niches and actively choose not to compete with each other in order to maximise profits. Their unspoken contract of non-competition is a disservice to the NZ public and steps should taken by the NZ government and the commerce commission to encourage either the growth and development of another home-grown grocery chain or if needed attracting and external international competitor.